LITURGY OF THE CELL PHONES

RELEASING PHONES

We surrender our phones to acknowledge that we are not as essential as we would have ourselves believe.
And to recognize how essential we are to this moment, this conversation, this process.

We put down our phones to put down the false belief that we can be more places than here, doing more things than this. And to commit to being fully present, here and now.

We turn off our phones to turn to each other and to the moment at hand, with full attention, creativity and welcome.

May we receive the gifts of full presence and essential connection. May God meet us in this moment.

Amen.

(cell phones are shut down and surrendered)

RETRIEVING PHONES

We return from this moment, taking with us the gift of being fully present. May we return with gratitude and perspective to the tasks before us and the noise around us, a little more willing to resist the urgency, and a little more able to receive the quiet gifts of each moment where God is present alongside us.

Amen.
